Profile

With over twenty years as a member of Stein Sperling’s commercial litigation team, Alexia Kent McClure has established a reputation for exceptional results from crafting and implementing strategic, creative approaches. Innovative and resourceful, Alexia is passionate about using the law to help people who have been wronged, and loves working with her clients to create a strategic plan to drive towards their goals. Alexia wants those who need her assistance to know they are “on the right side of a good lawyer.”

Alexia represents a broad range of commercial, non-profit and individual clients in her commercial litigation practice. Her experience runs the gamut from complex business dispute matters to construction law, elder law and estate litigation. She also is keenly focused on assisting vulnerable people who have been taken advantage of due to age, disability, or gender. Alexia has extensive experience navigating the complex challenges of obtaining emergency relief in business, family and elder law settings.

The creative use of legal strategy is a hallmark of Alexia’s work. She has received accolades from the bench for her compelling, effective use of videotaped deposition testimony during cross-examination in trial and is relentless in pursuing the best possible outcomes, balanced with practicality, for goals set with her clients.

In addition to her thriving commercial litigation practice, Alexia also serves as outside general counsel to national organizations that need regular guidance regarding governance, best practices, contracting, employment, and other legal matters. Making the most of her strong finance background, insurance law experience, and keen business sense, she works collaboratively with core leadership to facilitate compliance with new and changing laws, positioning to avoid litigation unless necessary, and helping these organizations continue to grow and prosper.
