Profile

As a recent law school graduate, Bethel Etta approaches each case with a cerebral and academic precision, geared toward solving a client's problem, consistent with the client's goals and objectives. Through consistent communication she ensures that her client feels heard and knows that they have a team fighting for them.

Bethel knows that attention to detail can turn the course of a case in her client's favor. She uses her strength in research and writing to find the keys to a winning strategy, and to ensure that key details are brought to light in an effective manner. It was her enjoyment in finding practical solutions for people's problems that first drew Bethel to the practice of law.

Bethel first joined Stein Sperling as a Summer Scholar while in law school. She served as a judicial intern for the Honorable Irma S. Raker before graduating and returning to Stein Sperling's commercial litigation department as an associate.
